EXTRA assignments do not count for credit, as they are not design to evaluate students, or as a make-up way to improve grades in the event of difficulty with regular credit. These assignments (and sometimes material) are for students who do not find the course challenging enough and want to look further into the math of the topics discussed.