

The Northeastern Honor Code

Students at Northeastern are members of an academic community dedicated to the achievement of excellence. They are thus expected to meet the highest standards of personal, ethical and moral conduct possible.

These standards require personal integrity, a commitment to honesty without compromise, as well as truth without equivocation and a willingness to place the good of the community above the good of the self. Obligations once undertaken must be met, commitments kept.

As members of the Northeastern community, individuals are expected to uphold the standards of the community in addition to holding others accountable for said standards. It is rare that the life of a student in an academic community can be so private that it will not affect the community as a whole or that the above standards do not apply.

- yes  no will exhibit and uphold honest and ethical behavior in all facets of my conduct as a participant of cs3200.
- yes  no declare that I will not take any measures to cheat on any exam: In particular, I will not receive assistance from anybody else for solving the problems on the exam, nor will I provide assistance to anybody else for solving the problems.
- yes  no understand that cheating during this exam is a serious offense and that the instructor will take appropriate action and institute a severe penalty if a cheating violation has occurred.
- yes  no understand that the instructor's goal with this measure is to provide a fair environment for every student to work and excel in this class without engaging in unethical behavior. Violating this academic integrity is disrespectful towards both the instructor and all my other classmates.
